Semester Abroad Gets Start

Pat Christian
Universe Staff Writer

Excitement and the anticipation that accompanies a long journey last week 146 BYU students
boarded their chartered jet

As part of the BYU Semester Abroad program for students with background in a foreign language to study for a semester in Madrid, Grenoble or Salzburg, Austria, the group
left Provo—then to Paris
for a few days of touring before a train to their destinations.

Students there were lugging 40 pieces of luggage to take care of and more practical problems to take care of. The largest and hardest job, however, was the emotional task of saying goodbye to say more than 100 friends.

Students with their arms around loved ones said their goodbyes
while checking in and picking up their boarding passes and passports. Some of the travelers were reviewing their French, German or Spanish with fellow travelers. Parents reminded sons or daughters to eat well and to get plenty of sleep.

When asked how it felt to be leaving the semester abroad, Vivian Valdez, a senior from San Francisco on her way to Madrid, said, "I'm in some kind of daze. I won't believe I'm going until I'm in the plane and the plane is in the air.
It's just so neat, I can hardly believe it."

Everywhere, everyone was taking pictures; it looked like a mass assault by the entire U.S.
press. People who wished they were going said their farewells to those who were going. Those who came to say goodbyes were many and it was hard not to run into a friendly well-wisher.

After the luggage was on the plane the students boarded the huge four-engined jet and waved from the ramp.

The doors were closed and the ramp pulled away from the plane as the engines screamed off their own last farewell.

As the plane rolled away from the boarding area the travelers waved from the windows and the crowd waved back—many holding back tears and many not. The plane finally, in its final gesture of travel, lifted off the runway and into the distance.

'No Minors Allowed'

"You mean I don't need my minor?"

Such were the cries often heard at Registration as students were confronted with the announcement from Dr. Robert K.
Thomas, BYU's academic vice president, that academic minors will no longer be required for graduation.

For seniors graduating in June or August, the change in requirements means they can graduate with or without a minor administered through the major department (depending upon the major department's exigencies and the student's wishes).

LOOK AHEAD

However, as of Sept. 1, 1969,
students seeking minors (other than teaching minors) will find that minor requirements will be controlled by departments issuing the minors. For minor-seeking students, those departments must also give certification for graduation, along with the major department.

As of Sept. 1, students who elect not to have minors can graduate from the university, provided their major departments do not require a minor.

Teaching minors will fulfill requirements of and be certified by the College of Education beginning Sept. 1, according to the requirements of Utah's State Board of Education.

Today it is very common for U.S.
universities not to require minors,
according to Dr. Chauncey Riddle, department chairman of the university's curriculum committee.

"The curriculum committee, the dean's council, and the chairmen of the various college departments have discussed the change in BYU's graduation requirements for the past 10 months," Dr. Riddle said.

"It is hoped that this change will make the attainment of a minor become more meaningful," Dr.
Riddle added. "Since the requirement for minors will soon be administered by the individual departments, the college may increase their minor requirements'
rigor."

Standards Applauded

President Ernest L. Wilkinson
has issued the following statement
regarding dress standards at BYU:

"As a new semester begins, I want to take this opportunity to express my appreciation to the vast majority of the student body who have faithfully adhered to the standards of this institution.

"This performance on the part of our students is largely responsible for commendations we receive every day as to the excellence of our student body; it is responsible specifically for the fine article which was published in the U.S.
NEWS AND WORLD REPORT of January 20, with the headline 'No
Flag Burning at BYU—A University
without trouble.'"

"The article possibly overstates
our virtues, but I want to express my appreciation to your students for conveying the impression in that article."

"We urge all students to, as President McKay has said,
'Remember who you are, for what you stand, and act accordingly.'
Your personal dress and grooming standards set you apart from other students who frequent other campuses who do not have our standards."

'Happy' Tickets

Tickets sales begin today
for the BYU production of
"Walking Happy."

The Broadway musical,
directed by Dr. Lael J.
Woodbury and conducted by Dr. Harold Goodman, will play Feb. 12-15 in the de Jong Concert Hall. Tickets for $2 seats are available free to BYU students on presentation of an activity
card.

Tickets will be sold in the Harris Fine Arts Center ticket offices, open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. daily.

TEARS, WAVES AND FOND GOODBYES AT DEPARTURE

Nearly 200 BYU students left the Salt Lake International Airport the problems of organization seemed nearly monumental. Leaving to spend the spring semester in either Madrid, Spain;

Grenoble, France or Salzburg, Austria, the students had much to do and little time to do it in.

SOUNDING BOARD

Why Are Audiences Inconsiderate?

Pierre Hatheway
Special Events Editor

Editor, Sounding Board:

Recently I had the opportunity to see the Orchestral concert. It was one of the most fascinating programs I have ever had the pleasure to enjoy. Not only did each performer have to have great skills in dancing, but acting ability as well. All of the dancers had such grace and interpretation of dance that I was held spellbound. . . . almost. There was one big problem with the concert. . . . the audience. Through the entire performance I was surrounded by some of the rudest people to ever walk the earth. Many had the nerve to walk in anywhere from five to forty-five minutes late, but they were allowed to enter and disrupt everything by tromping all over everyone, in an attempt to find a seat. Most of them ended up sitting on the floor. One of them accidentally sat on my foot, as a matter of fact. A great number of the people present were too shallow to appreciate the meanings of the dances, so they made their ignorance obvious by giggles and whispers that were loud enough for the performers to hear.

This was not the first time that I have encountered such an inconsiderate audience on this campus. I have had the same thing happen at every concert, play, movie, and opera that I have attended. I went to see "Richard III" four times. During one of these performances a couple behind me talked out loud through most of the play. Another time a gentleman (?) in the front row got up and walked out during a very dramatic scene, leaving a door open as he left. As if that wasn't bad enough, he then had the audacity to return in the middle of another scene. Can you imagine what the actors had to go through? When I saw "A Patch of Blue," I was very much disturbed by the girl sitting behind me. She laughed through the entire picture. For some unknown reason she thought that the problems of a blind girl were very funny. When I saw "You Can't Take It With You," I had to listen to a guy two seats away from me repeat every humorous line (and there were many) to his obviously deaf girlfriend. There are only a few examples. I could go on, but don't worry, I won't.

What is the matter with people around here? Are they too immature to appreciate a good performance? Why can't such people stay home? All they ever do is destroy shows that would otherwise be intellectually enjoyable or uplifting. I suggest to these persons that they either learn to appreciate the arts, or at least learn to control their childish actions and reactions. They are not only distract the audience, but also make it very difficult for the performers to keep their cool. I sincerely hope that these people, with all of their talking, giggling, and ridiculous comments will henceforth have the decency to stay home. If you don't think that you are going to enjoy yourself at a performance, why show up and ruin it for someone else as well?

Thank you
Rob Nuismer

Letters....

Congratulations

Editor:

The following letter was sent to President Wilkinson following the appearance of the article in U.S. News and World Report concerning BYU: Dear Doctor Wilkinson:

I have enjoyed reading about your university in U.S. News and World Report. As an old-time teacher, it is comforting to know that there is at least ONE school being run by the administrators, rather than by an idiotic smelly of alleged students. My congratulations!!

On July 8, 1957, I came across the Nevada-Utah state line, eastbound on route 50. Just over the line I stopped the car and said to my wife: "Well, I have graduated now - this is the 48th state I have been in, over the years." Since then Alaska and Hawaii have become states, so I can no longer crow about having seen "all of our states!"

We were travelling with an Airstream travel trailer and I have a habit of keeping a diary from day to day on our travels. It may amuse you to read the following excerpt from my diary of that day: "At 1:37 p.m. we came to the Utah State line, out in the open country, with nothing but a road marker to announce that fact, plus a filling station just on the Nevada side, taking advantage of a last opportunity to advertise that state's legalized depravity by such signs as "NEVADA BOUNDARY CLUB," "SLOT MACHINE INSIDE," and a big placard reading "DRINKING CUSTOMERS WANTED, NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY!"

We stopped for the night at a trailer park in Provo, run by Mr. Seely, to whom I gave one of my books for the privilege. The next night we were at Heathcliff Motel and Trailer Park at Salt Lake City. The proprietor, Mr. Seely, suggested a copy of my book, in lieu of cash for his charge. In the evening we went up to the Temple grounds and listened to a 30-minute recital. My diary said: "There were no contribution boxes and no admission charges. Refreshing!"

My only regret is that our limited stay did not permit a longer stay in your grand state. Being a life-long teetotaler as regards the twin poisons liquor and tobacco, it was a pleasure to escape all the shammy promotion features of these things. Tell your students I think they should feel PROUD of your restrictions along such lines. I am enclosing a tear sheet from my book - which may amuse you. May God continue to bless you and your people for the wonderful things you do and stand for.

J.W. Cunningham

Teach with Spirit

Editor:

Recently I have read with interest various comments concerning spirituality on our campus and I feel that I should express a concern of long standing. We pride ourselves at times for being closer to God than most such educational institutions, however, many of these same institutions have non-denominational chapels which are located centrally on their campus. Here anyone is welcome, to meditate, pray or just rest from the daily routine. Where on the BYU campus can one be alone with his Heavenly Father?

There is a lot of grass between buildings in the quadrangle areas. Wouldn't it be fitting to fill some of this space with buildings for this purpose? Brigham Young said, "Do not teach even the multiplication tables without the spirit of God." I wonder if students should learn them without the Spirit of God?

The Way It Is...

Grant Richards

By Judy Geissler

Grant Richards, if has often been said, will not go down in the books as the most dynamic student president BYU has ever had. This may very well be true. However, history will not record accurately if Grant does not go down at least as the most innovative student president ever.

The effects of the administration of the sandy-haired six-footer only begun to be felt, as "long-range planning" has been the watchword this year's activities of the ASBYU President's office.

Readily evident now are the results of some of his shorter-range. During the latter part of February, the anticipated student college became a reality, offering students the opportunity to take any of a half a dozen classes ranging in subject from human relations to constitutional law to Russian political thought.

LONG-RANGE PROGRAMS

A program to establish a pass-fail grading system for physical education classes, a plan to entirely revamp the general education class recommendation to end fall semester before the program - these are a few of the long-range programs initiated by Grant Richards. There are just beginning to be seen; many will not see completion during term of office, and will have to be carried on by his successor - whoever that may be.

RICHARDS

Work has just begun on three other projects of considerable merit. He has been striving to increase the student representation on the fundamental decision-making bodies of the University committees. To date, student representatives have voted on a Health Center advisory board, the Senior review board, the disciplinary Appeals Committee, and several others.

Now he wants to obtain student representation on departmental curriculum committees, and departments within the College of Social Sciences have agreed to try the proposal on a trial basis.

Another proposal is for a feedback system for graduates. Grant would have a questionnaire sent to all graduates one and five years after graduation, asking to what degree their department actually prepared them for work in that area.

His final project newly begun is an attempt to end spring semester by the end of May. He spoke with Robert Smith, Assistant Vice President of Academics for the University, and they have set the wheels in motion to see if it can be done.

GRANT, THE INDIVIDUAL

Still, after reading of what Grant has done and what he hopes to still wonder, "Yes, but what he really like as an individual. That's the most difficult question about Grant I can imagine, but the background might help.

He was born in October of 1944 in Logan, Utah. He attended high school in Utah, graduating from Pleasant Grove High School in 1962 the valedictorian with a perfect 4.0 record. He entered Brigham Young University after graduation, and served a mission in the North Pacific States during 1964-66.

As an undergraduate, Grant majored in Animal Science, graduated in 1968 with a 3.78. He is presently a candidate for a master's degree in communications, attaining a 3.6 average this past semester. He hopes to receive his degree in June of 1970, and go on for a doctorate at Stanford or Michigan.

His hobbies include referring to everyone by his last name (a pet of mine), motorcycling and target shooting. He lists his marital status "single at the present time" - a far cry from his reply last year, when he answered firmly, "Single until they build the temple in Provo. After it's an hour's drive to Salt Lake and they haven't even finished the first yet."

He is always willing to be of service as best he can, and the one phrase used to advise fellow students is "Discover the man within." He entered student politics at BYU "for the challenge of it, to see if I can do it." He is looking towards a career in communications or education administration, and he is extremely interested in the problems of inter- and intra-personal communication.

And that, to the best of my knowledge, is Grant Richards.

Talk Stresses

Spiritual Man

A better way to get "turned on" than drugs or alcohol was offered last Thursday night in an address by Charles M. Carr, Christian Science practitioner.

Speaking to 30 persons in the Wilkinson Center, Reader Carr entitled his address "Education Plus", explaining that successful living requires a good education, insight and a spirit of love for guidance.

"Man is more than merely a physical being," Carr said. "He is many things which cannot be explained in a test tube, but which exist, nevertheless. "By realizing this and by applying it to life, man would find success, just as Christ was successful through his good value judgments."

Engineering and Science at IBM

"The interdisciplinary environment keeps you technologically hot."

"Working in data processing today pretty much means you work in a broad spectrum of technologies," says Nick Donofrio.

An Associate Engineer at IBM, Nick is a 1967 graduate in Electrical Engineering. He's using his technical background to design circuits for computer memory systems.

"Circuit design used to be a narrow job," he says. "Today it can take you into the front yard of half a dozen different fields. In my job, for example, I work with systems design engineers, chemists, physicists, metallurgists, and programmers."

Nick describes a hypothetical case history: "A memory systems man comes to me with memory circuit requirements. Before I can start designing the circuit, I go to see a physicist. He helps me select an appropriate technology for the monolithic circuit.

"As the design develops, I work with a test group and also check back with the systems and semiconductor people to make sure I'm on the right track."

Keeping up

The interdisciplinary environment at IBM helps you keep up to date technologically. As Nick puts it, "You're constantly exposed to what's happening in other fields."

IBM needs technical graduates to work in research, design and development, manufacturing, product test, field engineering, and space and defense projects. We also need technical people in programming and marketing.

Cats Drop Aggies In Mat Battle

By Roger Gillespie
Sports Editor

A fantastic win streak was broken last night in the Fieldhouse before 5,000 plus screaming fans as the BYU Cougars upset the defending NCAA wrestling champs from Oklahoma State by a 16-14 count.

It was the first time that a team outside Oklahoma had ever beaten the Aggies in wrestling in 48 years. During that time the Aggies have won 26 of 37 NCAA championships and have been classified in wrestling as UCLA is to basketball.

The win, according to observers, is the biggest single event in the history of the BYU wrestling program.

The turning point in the match came early as Efraim Escalante wrestling at 130 lbs defeated Dennis Crow of the Aggies 6-5 with a take-down in the last few seconds. With the score tied at 3-3 Crow scored a take-down with less than 30 seconds left to make the score 5-3, OSU.

But Escalante escaped with 18 seconds left putting the score at 5-4, with the valiant Cougar still behind. But with five seconds left on the clock, Efraim turned defeat into victory with a take-down to put the score at the winning 6-5 margin.

Rondo Fehlberg repeated the Cougar surge in the 145 lb. division as he pinned his man after being on the short end of a 9-7 score. Fehlberg fought back to earn the pin after nearly being pinned himself earlier in the match.

Bill Osborne, wrestling in the 160 lb. class, put the victory away for the Cougars as he whipped highly touted Katsumi Suzuki 7-4. Thus put the score at 16-5 and made the Cougar lead insurmountable.

Conference Hits Drugs, Morals

Janie Roadworth, ASBYU Staff Writer, is facing a crisis when it comes to knowing how to handle the theme of the keynote address at the Seventh Annual Conference at BYU.

Janie J. Faux, chief of the ASBYU Services, Division of Health for the State of Utah, is on three basic topics: drugs, morals and family life.

"The drug crisis is beyond what we've imagined years ago," she said. "There exists a regular drug problem here. According to Dr. Faux, the community got its start at the university level with drug use, and is using student leaders as agents."

Dr. Faux asserted that drug use is as vicious as other vices, and the first step to more control is higher living.

Dr. Faux said young adults who had been disapproved with Dr. Faux's assertions. The panelists said they enjoyed their reactions to drugs and would probably continue using them, despite being at the State Mental Hospital for cure.

One of the panelists, who had gotten his start as a subject in a drug experiment argued that "Marijuana is no worse than alcohol." A 17 year old girl on the panel said her husband had used marijuana to "turn on" their little daughter.

MORALS

On the moral issue, Dr. Faux declared that "Youth is rebelling in the name of indignation. . . They want society to defend the basic issues that will make life better for others."

"Morality should mean that people conduct themselves properly, not always in terms of good and bad, black and white," he said. "It should be in terms of what is good for people."

'Impossible Dream' ...

Jensen Follows Quest

By Shari Jensen
Feature Writer

Anything worth doing is worth doing well—just ask Mary Bee Jensen, director of BYU's International Folk Dancers. And with the motto of doing things well, Mary Bee Jensen has excelled in many activities.

Perhaps her most obvious success is the International Folk Dancers. Beginning with only seven couples, Mrs. Jensen organized the unique group in 1956 to answer a request for folk dancing at a church smorgasbord in Orem.

In only 12 years it has grown to include 100 couples enrolled in an advanced folk dance class. Over 1,000 students try out for the group each year, according to Mrs. Jensen.

Although the group is large, Mary Bee—as she is affectionately known—takes the time to know each dancer personally. Her excellent personal relationship with each dancer and her desire for precision combine to make the Folk Dancers an internationally famous group—with the smiles that are as authentic as their costumes and precise movements.

"I just love dancing," she smiles. "I didn't have enough opportunities in college, and I was determined to give other young people the chance I missed."

Mary Bee does more than just give them the chance to learn folk dancing! To keep abreast of the developments in her field, Mary Bee attends folk dancing sessions at various colleges during the summer. Bringing home knowledge from top international authorities, she trains her campus group for their award-winning European tours.

A native of Provo, she thinks this area is beautiful—even after all her traveling. She calls herself a great dreamer.

Money Back Guarantee

We guarantee to increase the reading efficiency of each student AT LEAST 3 times. We will refund the entire tuition to any student who, after completing minimum class and study requirements, does not at least triple his reading efficiency as measured by our beginning and ending tests.
